Our readers will be glad to learn that our senior editor, Colonel M. C. Gallaway, is fast recovering from the effects of an over-dose of morphine, administered to him by mistake by Mrs. Gallaway, while he was suffering from a violent attack of neuralgia. For many hours his life hung upon a thread, but the prompt attention of his family and associates, and the skill of Dr. R. W. Mitchell, recalled him to life, and, as we hope, many, many years of usefulness. His honorable career as a Journalist, forming as it does part of the history of his time, and extending beyond the State he has so long and so ably served, will not be closed, we also hope, until long after the Union has entered upon the career of peace and prosperity which the triumph of the Democratic party in 1876 will signalize. We chronicle his recovery with sincere gratification, and tender to his wife and family the congratulations of the APPEAL corps.

The European part of the population of that city, who generally endeavor to have their heads under a tiled roof and live in houses of stone and lime, have had to fly for refuge to the picturesque thatched buts that border the river Pasiga, while the troops have had to take to the plain and camp out.

As happens often in Catholic countries exposed to earthquakes, the Indians and other inhabitants are apt to crowd into the churches with a superstitious idea of being safer there, and often lose their lives by such a glaring infraction of common sense and the laws of nature. Since 1863, however, when the heavy vault of the cathedral of Manilla fell in and crushed to death many Indians at prayer, they have become wiser, and anything like a serious shock of earthjunke makes them now take at once to Waterspont at Atacama. A waterspout, that curious phenomenon, and which is considered more likely to be met with at sea than on land, seems to be no joke. A private letter published in a Chili paper describes the effects of one that formed over Atacama and broke on the second ultimo over the mining population at Chimbero, causing no small fright and no little damage. About eleven o'clock of that day the wind began to blow strongly from the north, and the sky became overcast with black and dense clouds. one o'clock in the afternoon the thunders became terrific. One day the editor of an evenin a few days time are told in every ing journal wins 1,400,000 francs in sh rentes; the next his assistant gains 1,000,000 in Spanish mobelier. This stock has gone up from 400 and something to 1520, and at the rate of 50 or 100 francs a day. There is every reason to belive that it will reach 2000, Stocks of all kinds are rising, and every man, woman and child who has a few undred francs to spare, rushes off to the bourse and buys on a margin. This wonderful movement has been caused by M. Phillippart, a Belgian, who has had the honor of having a law presented in the chamber especially for him. Since his arrival money has been plenty, and Pactolus seems to have been turned into the gutters of Paris. All that he touches turns to gold. If M. Death was probably caused by congestion of the brain, the course, in which it would be wrong to inquire into and give publicity to the private habits of an individual. But when that individual holds a responsible public position it is essential to the proper discharge of his duties that he should possess a sound mind in a sound body; and if he puts an enemy in his mouth to steal away his brains, the people, whose servant he is, has a right to know it.
